House Plants.

There is danger of giving house plants too much rather than too little water in winter. During the short days and long nights, with little sunshine on the soil, it is hard to keep the earth at a temperature in which the plants can grow vigorously. All the surplus water added lowers the temperature and retards growth.

SHOW PROVING A BIG SUCCESS

"MADE IN JANESVILLE" WEEK ATTRACTS LARGE CROWDS.

MANY COMPLIMENTS GIVEN

Tasty Displays in the Various Windows About Town Bring Forth Words of Commendation From the Spectators.

The first day of the "Made in Janesville" display was a tremendous success and the second day, from indications at time of going to press will be a greater success viewed from the point of numbers of people on the streets.

Strong words of commendation are heard on every side at the beauty and attractiveness of the exhibits. That tomorrow will be seen a record breaking crowd of people on the streets is conceded.

The following are a list of firms whose displays are attracting the crowds. In tomorrow evening's edition the balance of the displays will be reviewed.

The Hough Shade Corporation has a truly artistic and beautiful display in the Postville Dry Goods Store window. They have constructed a porch and from the street you are looking into a pretty vista of golden colored trees and shady walks. They show their chairs, shades and hammocks to fine advantage.

Hockst and Lemingwell have used their own window for an attractive cigar display.

The Gazette Job Office has the Union Pacific Tea window and has an especially interesting display for those interested in fine printing.

Delaney & Murphy have a display of cigars that is certainly inviting to men who appreciate good cigars.

The Crook Brothers Co. has a show of their products that is so well made that it is attracting widespread attention.

The Janesville Shirt & Overall Co. have a display that will appeal to every man. They make pants, overalls, jumpers, shirts, and a varied line of work clothes that are so good that every man when in need of such articles, should ask for their brand.

The Janesville Carriage Co. has a display in their own Display Rooms (opposite the Gazette office) that should be seen by everyone. They show carriages and busses that are magnificent pieces of workmanship.

The Harris Chemical Co. and J. T. Wright Soap Co. have a combination display, that shows household necessities that our women readers should become familiar with because we dare say many have been buying these same goods made by out-of-town manufacturers.

Hohenadel Canning Co. has a display in Archie Relds window that is educational and very interesting. They show their canned products to excellent advantage and the plate of cabbage which the dairy maid in Janesville is ready to serve.

The Nichols Harness Co. has a display that will appeal to every man who owns a horse for it shows some exceptionally fine sets of harness.

The Williamson Pen Co. has a window the lower part of which is filled with shavings of rubber and on these are set the displays of pens. It is a very neat and pretty window and is attracting much attention.

The Janesville Wholesale Grocery Co. has a display that is drawing crowds to their window. One woman was overheard to remark "Why Frank, there's the coffee we buy," which shows that she was directly interested in this show window as are all the women.

The Janesville Floral Co. has a window full of artistically arranged vases of beautiful flowers and it is getting its full share of attention.

Thoroughgood & Co. have a display that is one of the most interesting in the city. They show Clear Boxes Cases, Labels and the different kinds of cedar which they use in the manufacture of their products. This display is in the Dredick Bros. window and should not be missed.

The Willard-Harlow Co. have a very unique display in the Olin & Olson window. They show a big spark plug and many smaller ones besides other articles which they make.

The Rock Silver Woolen Mills has a display that is a revelation to nearly everyone in Janesville. They show the raw wool and from that on up to the beautiful suitings and cloths which are made here and shipped to the largest clothing houses in the country.

The Bassett & Echlin window is one to gladden the heart of an expert window trimmer. A background of colorful white fine milled and brass trimmed sets of harness are properly arranged in the foreground, makes this one of the big hit windows of this exhibition.

Balls of twine, rolls of fluff, snow white cotton and a soft "good to sleep on" mattress fill the window used by the Rock River Cotton Co. and they are certainly to be complimented on their display for it is creating much favorable comment.

J. G. & P. G. Owen have a display of Lightning Rods and their service that is very attractive and certainly educational.

The Shurtliff Ice Cream Mfg. Co. have a machine in the Electric Co. window that is a continuous freezer ice cream machine. It is kept in operation and is attracting many sightseers. They are also showing cottage cheese, butter in packages and announce that on Saturday they will sell Ice Cream for the benefit of the Hospital.

Remember that tomorrow there will be a continuous Band Concert by the Imperial Band beginning at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Hundreds of on-lookers are expected to be in the city and it will be altogether a fitting close to so successful an exhibition.

Better come down town tomorrow and join the happy crowds—it is the last day and it will be the big day, so don't miss any of it by staying at home. There are several free demonstrations and a hundred or more beautiful window displays to look at.

"ITALIAN JOE" IN THE TOILS

AT WORK IN SOUTH JACKSON ST. DITCH WHEN ARRESTED.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY CHARGE

Has Been Preferred Against Him by Dezo Budie Who Was Beaten and Mugged Here Last December.

Joe Budd (known locally as "Italian Joe") an Austrian employed at ditch-digging on South Jackson street, was arrested by Chief Appleby and Officer Patrick this morning on a charge of assaulting and robbing a companion named Dezo Budd near the C. & N. W. depot, along about the night of December 10, 1909. Budd started down the ditch when the chief appeared at the brink and spoke his name but Officer Panning was there waiting for him and if he entertained ideas of flight, he quickly abandoned them.

A Brutal Attack.

Budd is a man of small stature and the attack of which he complained at the time was a particularly brutal one. On the pretense that there was a saloon in the neighborhood and that he wanted to buy a round, the little man's assailant lured him to a dark place south of the station and then struck him down without warning, went through his clothes, removing $21 from the pockets, and then took to his heels. When Budd recovered consciousness he called loudly for help and Officer Thomas Morley came running to the scene, also a traveling man who had witnessed the whole performance. Budd was missing next morning from his post at the ditch-digger about six weeks ago. Budd, after various vicissitudes in Chicago and near Madison, also came drifting in again last Saturday and presently found himself working in the same trench with the man who is alleged to have knocked him senseless and relieved him of $21. Budd, according to his story, lost little time in demanding the return of the money. Budd is said to have "looked for" his "time" at first, and subsequently to have failed to make good.

Couldn't Stay Away.

But Budd, imbued perhaps with the idea of "succeeding in Janesville," couldn't stay away from the town and wandered back to find employment as a ditch-digger about six weeks ago. Budd, after various vicissitudes in Chicago and near Madison, also came drifting in again last Saturday and presently found himself working in the same trench with the man who is alleged to have knocked him senseless and relieved him of $21. Budd, according to his story, lost little time in demanding the return of the money. Budd is said to have "looked for" his "time" at first, and subsequently to have failed to make good.

Made Bloodthirsty Threats.

To big Dickon Vidschmer, another worker in the ditch, the alleged foolhardy man is said to have confided the information that he not only had no intention of returning the cash but that if poor Budd said anything to the police he would cut his throat from ear to ear. Also, he had no particular fear of collection and they had better keep their distance as he shot two of them who tried to arrest him in Milwaukee. He is also alleged to have boasted of his strategy in scrupulously avoiding railroads in the first twenty-five miles of his flight after holding up Budd and according to Vidschmer he remarked that he had his eye on two fellows who had been working winter and summer at the sugar factory and had saved up a good sized sum of money. If Vidschmer would help him, they would hold these fellows up with a revolver. It was much easier to get money that way than to work in a ditch.

Hearing on Tuesday.

Budd appeared before Judge Lange in municipal court this afternoon and his preliminary hearing was fixed for Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. He was unable to furnish $800 bail and will have to spend the intervening time in jail.

USING STALE BREAD

THE ECONOMICAL HOUSEWIFE FINDS IT ALWAYS HANDY.

So Useful That It is a Good Plan to Buy an Extra Loaf Occasionally to Keep for Drying—Its Many Uses.

Besides actual money waste, the economical housekeeper finds it inconvenient not to have stale bread on hand. There is so much that can be done with it from the stuffing of fowls to the preparation of desserts, that it is a good plan in large families to buy an extra loaf every other day to keep for drying.

Do not use bread that has not been carefully dried for crumbs. If allowed to get very stale in bread box it frequently has a musty flavor. Do not, on the other hand, brown it in the oven, as it does not make a good color in frying. Put in a cool oven over night, and it is usually dry enough in the morning to grate or roll.

Do not use crumbs for crumbs. Bread is better than rolls or biscuits. While it is provident to have a supply of crumbs in glass jars for emergencies, do not prepare large quantities at once. The flavor is better if crumbs are freshly rolled.

Never omit to sift crumbs, whether rolled or run through a grater. Before cooking season with salt and pepper and add dots of butter if not intended for deep fat frying.

Another use for stale bread is to make small well browned thin pieces of toast, not too dry, for garnishing. Bread a day old is best. Toast it evenly, and cut off the crusts with a sharp knife to make an even edge.

These bits are shaped according to the dish in which they are to be served—long and thin, circles or triangles. Diamonds and round are used under individual dishes, as tomatoes, eggs, Welsh rarebit. Croutons are frequently substituted for toast forms.

Croutons are rarely well made. There are several ways of preparing them. They are buttered and browned in the oven, fried in deep fat or in a skillet with butter or crisped in drippings.

Sizes also differ from the tiny cube a quarter of an inch each way to three inch long slippers to eat with boiled eggs.

The simplest way to prepare a crouton is to cut slices of white bread three-quarters of an inch thick. Butter lightly on both sides, then cut into three-quarter inch squares and brown in a skillet over a moderate fire. Turn often. As soon as lightly browned out on browned paper on a colander to drain and keep hot. Serve quickly.

Croutons are used with most clear or cream soups, and as a garnish to curries, hash, certain stews, and with poached and fried eggs.

Toast demands bread at least a day old. Toasts differ widely, some insisting on it being browned through and crisp, others liking it soft. The best toast is crisp on outside and soft within.

Crusts should be removed, slices cut about a half inch thick and of even size, and the heat must be regular and not too intense. Watch carefully and serve at once under a cover or folded in a napkin to retain heat.

If toast is to be served buttered, the butter must be soft, spread evenly as soon as bread is removed from toaster, and set for a minute in oven.

All breads do not toast alike. That with a close grain, fine and smooth, is best. Do not prepare large quantities before a meal or your toast is sure to be unappetizing.

A delicious dessert is made from three-inch cubes of stale bread dipped in an egg batter and fried in a deep fat. Serve hot with a rich wine sauce.

History Repeating itself.

The American Israelite in the current number says that among the numerous explanations of the term "Four Hundred," usually applied to New York society, none has ever been offered that "fits without wrinkles, whereupon we suggest the following solution: Abah, according to 1 Kings, xii, summoned the four hundred prophets to consult them about attacking the Syrians at Ramoth Gilead. Among them was Zedekiah, who struck his rival, Micalah, on the cheek because the latter indulged in the first well authenticated case of "snack-taking," viz., stating that the four hundred were inspired by a lying spirit. Thus does history repeat itself—more or less accurately."

THEATER

The wildest, cleverest, most original comedy penned by a modern dramatist is "Les Romanesques," by Edmond Rostand, the author of "Chantecler," "L'Aiglon," and "Cyrano de Bergerac." The erstwhile writer of tragedies has turned his talents to the writing of every continental country has noticed his sides with laughter and admiration. "Les Romanesques" is a delightful remembrance of classic in its delicious absurdities of comedy complications, but it possesses in addition a far greater reach of dramatic variety and poetic language. In Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" we have what has been acknowledged as the greatest love tragedy of the world. Imagine the courage and inventive genius of Rostand, then, who dared to take the same plot utilized by the immortal bard and turn his theme to the more grateful and amusing elements of legitimate comedy. For that is what "Les Romanesques" is, "Romeo and Juliet" satirized. Yet none of its beautiful romance is destroyed. The young lovers of "Les Romanesques," Perceval and Sylvette, are quite as ideal as their Shakespearean prototypes. Their love seems quite as entrancing, and if their first act is disillusioned, they are finally joined at the close of the play on a much sadder, normal basis, which promises far more permanent and enduring life than the fine spun ideal of romances and novellas. Perceval and Sylvette are, in fact, at the opening of the play two youngsters, little better than children. Their fathers, Bergamini and Desqueneux, two old Frenchmen, live on adjoining estates divided by a wall. They dream for years has been to marry off their children, fear out the dividing wall, and live in mutual unity as one family the remaining years of their lives. They will well know that a mere marriage of convenience will not attract the youthful imagination of Perceval and Sylvette, and so, in spite of the fact that they are friends of years standing, they pretend to their youthful offspring that they are deadly enemies, and forbid Perceval and Sylvette to even approach the dividing walls of the two estates, lest they be subject to insult at the hands of their embittered neighbors. Perceval and Sylvette, fed into the actually pined to have company, they are forbidden to have company with one another are, of course, filled with an overwhelming desire to do just what they have been explicitly forbidden to do. As a result, they meet by the wall, imagine themselves a modern edition of Romeo and Juliet, and decide to marry in spite of the supposed hatred of their parents. In order to facilitate matters and bring the affair to a climax, Bergamini and Desqueneux plan a fake abduction of Sylvette by one Master Stratford, a retired actor and bravo, who was formerly been a member of Moliere's troupe of players in the French provinces. Perceval is allowed, apparently, to effect the rescue of Sylvette through his own prowess, and run Stratford through the body in a terrible mock duel, the parents giving their benediction on the union of their two children, with some tears burying their nefarious enmity. But, alas, the children find out that they have been duped and discover their romance is built on deceit. They part, and each seeks the wider experience of life which the novellas and philosophers so earnestly preach, only to learn as the rest of us must, that romance is, after all, found at home and around us.

"Les Romanesques" is in the end a proclamation against false romance. It is related as humorously and with such quaint comedy shifts directed against the fallacies and deceptions of the age, that it finds a quick response in the hearts of its auditors.

Mr. Nicholson, who impersonates the central figure of the play, Stratford, has made the hit of his career in this fantastic role. It is a characterization closely akin to the extravagant Colonel Briden of Othello, or the rollicking Petruchio as drawn by Shakespeare. Mr. Nicholson's recent run at the Ziegfeld Theatre in Chicago, proved one of the decided hits of the season.

As the first presentation that Rostand's comedy has ever been given locally, the coming engagement of "Les Romanesques" will be one of the significant attractions of the current theatrical season and will be seen at Myers Theatre Friday, Sept. 30.

maintain her prestige. The vicerey's position is one of personal danger, not only to himself but to his family. At any moment his life may be attempted and only by the most careful maintenance of guards is he able to travel from one part of the country to another.

Meat and Rice Balls.

Put 2 1/2 pound each pork steak and round steak through food chopper, salt and pepper to taste, add 1 raw egg and 2 cup rice that has been soaked over night in water enough to cover it. If water is not all absorbed set on back of stove until absorbed. Make into small round balls. Put can of tomatoes in large kettle, season with salt and pepper. Cut two green peppers in halves, remove seeds, and rinse in cold water. Add to tomatoes, and put in meat balls. Boil slowly three-quarters of an hour. Last quarter of an hour add large tablespoon butter. Do not thicken gravy. Cayenne pepper or chili-sauce may be used when pepper cannot be obtained. Delicious when served with corn nuts made by rule that follows: To 1 quart white cornmeal add 2 tablespoons baking powder, and a teaspoon salt, and sift well. Add milk to form a stiff dough that can be shaped into little cakes. Drop into smoking fat and cook until delicately browned.

TO WASH WHITE SILK.—After washing carefully in the usual way, add one tablespoonful of wood alcohol to the rinsing water. It will prevent white silk from becoming yellow. This is recommended by one who has had great success in laundering white silk garments in this way.

TO SET COLORS.—To set green, blue, lavender and pink colors in wash goods soak in alum water before washing. Two ounces to a tub of water. Black, dark blue, and gray should be soaked in strong salted water.

The Best Values That Money Can Buy

Over 400 Rock County Farmers Use It

Case's Molasses Feed

is no longer an experiment. Over four hundred farms in Rock county alone have given this wonderful stock food a thorough trial and there has yet to be a single case reported where it failed to make good.

Ex.-Gov. Hoard, Editor of Hoard's Dairyman, probably the highest authority in America on feeding and handling the dairy herd, says:

"I feed my dairy herd a regular ration of molasses every day and I find that they thrive on it. It makes their flesh fat and their hair glossy. It gives zest to their appetite and helps their digestion. IT INCREASES THE QUANTITY AND IMPROVES THE QUALITY OF THE MILK, for it puts the cow in a good humor and a good humored cow is always the best milker. For milch cows molasses stimulates the production of milk and in EVERY case a greater production of butter."

It has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that molasses feed is extremely beneficial to run-down colts, calves and live stock. It only remains for the wide-awake, up-to-date farmer to make every head of live stock he owns produce the utmost in dollars and cents. This can only be done by INTELLIGENT CARE AND FEEDING.

Case's Molasses Feed is NOT AN EXPENSE BUT IT IS A POSITIVE SAVING to feed it BECAUSE THE INCREASED PROFITS WILL PAY FOR THE SMALL OUTLAY MANY TIMES OVER.

The time of year is here, when a good heavy frost will kill off the remaining pasture and the feed problem is staring you in the face.

Case's Molasses Feed is guaranteed to get you the results you desire or your money will be refunded. DON'T DELAY—order it now.

CROPS AS MONEY.
The world's output of gold this year will represent about $500,000,000. Just what it cost to produce it may not be known, but until quite recently every dollar taken out of the mines represented a dollar put in, so that while the gold crop was new money it simply took the place of old money. This means that it will be a long time before gold will shrink as a standard of value.

The gold of the world as it comes from the mine is the property of comparatively few people. The man or the company who owns the bullion may take it to the mint and the government stamp converts it into money which is still his property.

But there is another source of revenue of vastly greater value, which is more evenly distributed and yet excites but little attention because it is so common.

This is represented in the products of the soil converted into money, not at the mine, but through the markets, and the money produced is just as new as the gold from the mine.

In this fund alone the value of this product is 18 fold more than the entire gold output of the world, a sum so fabulous that it is difficult to comprehend.

This new wealth is the property not of the few, but of the many, for millions of farmers own it in the raw just the same as a handful of miners own the gold, and these investors take out of the soil so much more than they put in that the wealth of the nation is constantly increasing.

Collier's Weekly publishes the following brief synopsis, which is worth reading and digesting. It is a blessing to know that mother earth is not disturbed by political agitation.

"Here in the United States the amount and value of the crops each year is the very first consideration in the country's welfare.

"It is impossible to realize what the new crop would every year mean, by putting down the figures on paper. We look at the figures representing $1,000,000. We have some conception of what they mean, but no adequate conception. The average salary of clerks in the United States is not over $1,000 per annum. On the million dollars one hundred clerks could live ten years; one clerk could live a thousand years.

"The total crops of the United States this year will probably total up nine thousand millions of dollars in value. This will do nine thousand times as much as the one million dollars which we have been trying to get some grasp of.

"But the wonder of it is that this is all new wealth which comes to us by made in a year's time. Some of it comes in much less time. Secretary Wilson said of the corn crop last year, valued at $1,720,000,000, that it came up from the soil and out of the air in one hundred and twenty days—$11,000,000 a day for one crop; really enough for two breadstuffs daily, for peace or war."

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

One of the planks of the new republican platform is a demand for an employers' liability act enabling an employee to collect damages whether injured through carelessness or otherwise.

As a vote-catcher this might prove a popular measure, but injustice is so apparent that the law would be thrown out of any court in the land.

The supreme court of Maine has just rendered a decision on a case of this kind where the plaintiff in the course of his employment was injured by flying particles of steel in striking a cold chisel with a seven-pound hammer on an iron surface. The jury heaved him when he claimed that he was ignorant of the manifest possibilities of the act, if the modern principle of "sunk the corporation, anyhow," awarded damages.

In setting aside this verdict the final court of appeals says:

"1. Employees in the prosecution of their work must exercise their senses and reasoning faculties for the discovery of the risks attending their employment, and unless they stipulate otherwise, they assume the risks such exercise would reveal to them.

"2. The testimony of a witness is not controlled by any other witness based on such testimony when the testimony is so contrary to common knowledge and experience as to be untrue.

"3. The danger to be apprehended from the breaking off and flying about of bits of steel from the point of a small steel cold chisel held against an iron surface and struck hard with a seven-pound hammer is so obvious that an employee of mature years and of experience in the use of steel drills must be held to have appreciated the danger even against his testimony that he did not."

An eastern paper in commenting, says:

"The clause requiring employees to exercise their senses and reasoning faculties will stand in any court in this country, nor would it be possible for the congress or any state legislature to pass a law which would abrogate this condition, without permitting plain confiscation."

This is true to the letter. The average employer is an intelligent man, and yet much of the machinery which he uses contains elements of danger, requiring intelligent operation to avoid accident.

The man who suffers from his own carelessness, may be entitled to sympathy, but there is no justice in demanding damages of the man who is in no way responsible.

SELECTED SUGGESTIONS.

"The real goods: Do good, do good, make good.

"Get in and dig, or turn in the pick and quit the job.

"Don't be a kicker. Any old mule can beat you at the game.

"If you can't saw wood all the time, split a little once in a while.

"You must be a man with a purpose, if you hope to succeed at anything.

"Do your day and say your say now; there is nothing doing in the grave.

"There are doers and doers—live wretches and 'dead' ones. Which are you?

"The fellow who has been given a run for his money seldom needs to sprint for exercise.

"Before fixing your eyes too firmly on the stars, see that your opportunity isn't in the basement."

These terse selections are from an insurance journal, but they apply to all classes and are worth noting.

The placing of assistant postmasters on the civil service list removes the last vestige of authority that the postmaster enjoyed. Instead of selecting his own first assistant, with reference to ability, he will now be compelled to take any thing that the civil service mill turns out. That sort of reform is of doubtful nature, even if the President does endorse it.

The hero of the hour is Walter R. Brookings, a pupil of the Wright brothers, who drove a biplane from Chicago to Springfield yesterday, a distance of 188 miles, at the rate of 35 miles an hour. The flight was spectacular from start to finish, and was completed without accident. Anything seems possible these days, but it will be some time before aerial navigation becomes popular.

Loyalty to principles and loyalty to the national administration were so completely blended in the republican platform at the Saratoga convention, that there is no longer any doubt of Colonel Roosevelt's attitude toward both. Not an insurgent, but a progressive republican, he joins hands with the big man at the White House for better government. The people are with him and good results will follow.

Francis McGovern, the governor to be, will make the state a good executive. His record in Milwaukee, while district attorney, is a guarantee of honesty backed by the courage of conviction, and his administration will be clean and wholesome.

The crowds on the street last night, attracted by the displays of goods made in Janesville, expressed a popular sentiment of appreciation. The disposition to work together and all become boosters for the best city in the land, was never more apparent. The man who is not loyal to his home deserves to become an outcast, and the man who is not loyal to his home town, merits the same fate. The people of Janesville have occasion to be both loyal to and proud of the city which they call their home.

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE.

NEAR TO NATURE.

"I do not see how you can be content in these quiet mountain places. I know I should almost die of loneliness," said a young girl.

She was sincere.

Few young persons have learned to live with themselves, and few, young or old, know "the power of sitting still."

"There is an art of living in solitude. It is not in the mere idleness of yawning one's life away or of eating and sleeping or lazy loafing, but in dreaming Nature's dreams after her.

For Nature, always busy, is always dreaming.

If you find in the dream of that purring mountain stream the lesson of cheerfulness, if you find giant pine teaches you the dignity and poise of life, if the "hushed sweetness" of summer's noon brings a message of abundant fullness, if "the sorrows of autumn" speak to you of peace, if the curtain of night tells of the "dream of resting weary limbs on beds of asphodel," you have caught old Nature's closest secret.

Lonesome? Why, you are companying with the infinite, and human speech is only childish prattle.

What think you can be more miserable than that old age which finds no company in solitude? For the day will come when all endeavor shall be barren, when things of sense give only passing pleasure, when fruition turns to ashes, when even fame shall be a fad.

But if you "held communion with her visible forms" Nature will "speak to you" "in various language." She will "speak upon you as you are aware" and take away the sting of sorrow or the sense of failure or the pang of loneliness.

Get acquainted with Nature and yourself. "Go forth and list to Nature's teachings" and let her put you in communion with yourself. You will learn her ways, and dream her dreams. She will solve your problem by her silence. For, where is the beginning, where the end of living, being, longing? Listen. Friend! God answers with a silence of pure gold—Just as it did.

And so shall you never fear to be alone, for always there shall be about you yourself and Nature and God. And then, having learned your lesson, some day you shall "draw the drapery of your couch about you and lie down to pleasant dreams."

Valuable Information.

We heard on the street the other day of a man who claimed he was too poor to take his horse paper, but all the same he read a notice in some other paper telling how to prevent a horse from stobbering, and sent $1.50 for the receipt. When the $1.50 worth of information came it said: "Teach your horse how to spit."—Exchanges.

The country's now in better case than 'twas in any age; for every man there is a place to earn a goodly wage; the poor man's hand-er's well supplied, against the winter's storm; so let us rip things open wide, and spring some new returns. The merchant has within his till a good fat roll or two; the wheels are turning in the mill, and idle hands are few; the warehouse groans beneath its weight of costly goods and bales; so let us get our gall on straight, and send some men to jail. The cities flourish and expand, all nature laughs and sings; prosperity's on every hand, and peace should spread its wings; but we shall all our time devote to this rip-snorting game; overlook the painting, while we note the flyspeck on the frame. There's something wrong when people thrive; there's something wrong, my friend; we want to see bad times arrive, and have the banks suspend, and see the mills all close their doors, and half the merchants fail; so let us fill the air with roars, and send some men to jail!

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

PLAYING THROUGH A VIOLIN

Phonographic Attachment Produces Perfect Tones by Ingenious Device of Wisconsin Man.

Another phonographic attachment and one that is more ingenious than most, is that devised by a Wisconsin man and shown in this illustration. It consists of so arranging a violin on top of the other instrument to produce perfect violin tones from the phonograph record. An arm projecting from the phonograph box holds the neck of the fiddle, which rests face downward over the record. The neck is pivoted on this rest so that the fiddle can turn about. Clamping forks engage the bridge of the violin and a stylus is secured to the bridge. When the record revolves the stylus communicates the notes through the horn, and, as may be imagined, the tone is vastly more realistic than when produced by the Plays Through Violin. old method. In fact, the violin notes thus produced are almost perfect, as they may well be when it is remembered that they emanate from the same sounding board as when a bow is drawn across the strings.

SIMPLICITY IN CAN OPENER

Substantial Household Utensil Invented by Detroit Man Used Without Fear of Cutting.

Every housewife would undoubtedly welcome the invention of a really simple and substantial can opener, one that she could operate without danger of cutting her hands. Simplicity and efficiency seem to be the keynote of the one shown in the illustration below, designed and invented by a Detroit man. In opening a can the point at the end is thrust into the central portion of the top of the can and the bar brought so that it lies parallel with the top of the can. The cutter is then regulated on the toothed bar so that it will cut either the top of the can or the side. With a firm pull on the handle the tin can be easily opened. It will be noticed that there are practically two cutters, one for cutting the top of the can and another for cutting the side of the can. This will be found convenient when it is desired to remove the contents without disarranging them.

Cuts Top or Side of Can.

UMBRELLA IN YOUR POCKET

Twenty-Six Inch Screen Invented by Minneapolis Man Easily Folded Up and Carried.

A 26 inch umbrella that will fold up and go in an inside pocket without crowding has been invented and constructed by a Minneapolis man. This seems almost incredible. The handle and all the ribs consist of the steel tubes, in sections, which telescope one inside the other. The covering is of silk, which takes up but little room. The wooden handle of the umbrella is hollow and receives all the rest of the telescoping umbrella rod when shut up. A small light case is provided to contain the whole, which, as stated, goes easily into the pocket. If such a device can be made and sold for a reasonable price there is little doubt that the inventor will make a fortune.

England's Radium Deposit. England's only radium deposit, the Trent with mine in Cornwall, has produced its first little output, about one-twentieth of an ounce, which is worth $150,000. The Austrian company which has a corner on radium has made arrangements to secure the product of the mine.

MOUTHPIECE IS DIRT PROOF

Flush Device Arranged by New York Inventor Makes Transmitter More Sanitary Than Cup.

A flush mouthpiece for telephones has been designed by a New York inventor for the purpose of making the transmitter more sanitary. It consists of an aluminum cup attached to the diaphragm of the transmitter by means of the bolt and nut used in fastening the front electrode to the diaphragm, says Popular Mechanics. The cup extends through the transmitter case and its outer edge is turned over so as to come nearly flush with the face of the case. The cup fits close enough to the case to seal its interior from dust and dirt, but does not come in actual contact with it. There are no grooves for the lodgment of dust or dirt.

Tests of the new transmitter are claimed to prove that it gives just as good service over distances of from 1 to 500 miles as the cup type now in general use.

USING ELECTRICITY AT SEA

Important Part It Plays in Developing Great Speed Attained by Immense Ocean Liners.

A writer in the Electrical Review, of London, gives an interesting account of the important parts played by electricity in developing the great speed attained by the Mauretania. He says:

"Without in any way reflecting upon the abilities of the engineers, it must be admitted that they did not seem to have grasped the great possibilities of the various auxiliaries on the ship and it is attention to these auxiliaries which determines the ultimate fulfillment of the designers' ideas.

"As is now well known, practically all the auxiliary machinery on the Mauretania is electrically driven, and it is equally well known, especially among electrical engineers connected with shipwork, that marine engineers have a stubborn and conservative objection to anything other than the steam-driven plant with which they have been brought up. When, therefore, an electrical installation of more than 2,000 horse power was thrust upon them with practically no qualified electricians on board to enlighten them as to its proper usage, they naturally felt some trepidation, and had little desire to attempt any record speeds.

"Perhaps it is not quite evident why the speed of the ship should entirely depend on the auxiliary plant, and in explanation it must be said that practically all fast boats require a relatively enormous quantity of steam at high pressure, which can only be obtained from the boilers when high-power forced-draft fans are employed to supply air to the furnaces, and a slight diminution in their output has an immediate effect on the steam pressure of the boilers, and consequently on the speed of the engines and propellers. In the case of the Mauretania the forced-draft fans are electrically driven."

According to the writer, the entire dependence of the boat's speed on the electric generating plant is now thoroughly understood, and one of the first considerations is to keep up the voltage. Before this, it might drop 10 or 15 per cent, and the only result was a dim light and the slowing down of a few unimportant motors—but on the Mauretania it is vital. In conclusion, we read:

"It is strange, on the face of it, that such apparently small details should be the means of converting a 23-knot boat into one of 26 knots; but it is no exaggeration to say that the records of the Mauretania are entirely due to a better understanding of the electrical conditions."

ELECTRICAL NOTES.

The cost of the transatlantic cable averages nearly $1,200 a mile. Modern electric boats are so designed that the speed varies with the load.

The new metal filament lamps are not nearly so fragile as the earlier types.

A portable electrolytic bleaching apparatus has been devised for household use to remove stains from textiles.

A new sanitary mouthpiece for telephones is made flush with the transmitter case to avoid germ-catching corners.

A 20-watt tungsten lamp gives one-fourth more light than the carbon filament lamp of 15 candlepower, on one-half the current.

A coin-in-the-slot electric curling-iron heater for the use of female patrons of the hotels and other public places has been patented.

An electric alarm for incubators, making use of a thermostat, rings a bell when the temperature rises above or falls below the egg hatching point. Probably the best timekeeper in the world is the electric clock in the Berlin observatory. It is enclosed in an airtight cylinder and its deviation is practically nil.

THE OTHER GIRL

There wasn't a particle of doubt that Hassard belonged to the other girl, by all signs, tokens and wireless messages caught on the fly. Estelle, however, was assured of this. Moreover, she was assured of it and this made her subsequent conduct all the more reprehensible.

Hassard was not to blame, though he was plainly dejected by the other girl for observing Estelle's complexion and the fascinating tilt of her head when they all arrived at the house party. Hassard was only a mortal man after all. Estelle doubtless would have failed to notice that he was on earth except for the fact that she and Bob had had a little quarrel on the way down. Bob plainly needed discipline and Hassard providentially appeared at the opportune moment with admiration in his eyes.

The other girl dawned on Estelle's consciousness later.

"The other girl was the sort that make a man remember all the heights he was going to scale when he was reading his graduating essay and ashamed him with a sense of his own unworthiness. She had big serious blue eyes under beautifully straight brows and a childish mouth that would droop heartrendingly and her hair looked beautiful when merely parted and waved down over her ears without any rats or puffs. This alone would convince any other woman that she was irresistible.

After Estelle got a good look at the other girl she wondered why on earth Hassard was such a goose as to glance at any one else. She also saw that the other girl, with all her charms, was one of the kind who is helpless in the hands of her own sex. She didn't in the least know how to fight back when a man was being snatched from her. If Estelle had not been so irritated at Bob this might have influenced her, but at a certain point any girl will sacrifice any other girl ruthlessly to further her own ends, and Bob most certainly had to be disciplined.

Hassard sat next Estelle at dinner and his devotion was apparent. Afterward they sat in a corner and brazenly looked at a book of kodak pictures upside down, while every one else was playing bridge or strolling outside on the brick terrace. He held her hand a fraction too long when he said good-night and she let him—because she knew Bob was watching them where he was distractedly listening to his host talking the drainage and soil enrichment.

What was more, the other girl saw it, too. Then she went upstairs with her hand held high without letting Hassard say good-night to her. By the next day, when Hassard and Estelle played golf together, rode together and sang together, it was evident that Bob was gnashing his teeth with wrath and regretting his indiscretion. Not that Hassard openly deserted the other girl—he gave her what time was left. You see, he really was very fond of the other girl, but he was quite sure of her, and that makes a difference.

The other girl was very unhappy. You could tell it by the way she laughed and chattered and pretended she was having the time of her life. Occasionally Estelle's conscience would smite her and then she would remind herself that she wasn't really having a good time, either.

When you are so mad at the man you are in love with that you are driven to endure the love-making of another man who doesn't mean it, anyhow, that situation alone is sufficiently irritating without the added prick of knowing you are making another girl miserable.

The other girl's accusing eyes and determined laughter got on Estelle's nerves. Wasn't she having trouble enough of her own without this added worry? Why couldn't the creature fight back instead of submitting to a superior force in this meek way? It would serve her right to take Hassard away from her for keeps—maybe she could do it.

Then Estelle, who was not unkind, but just human, began to worry in earnest after she ran across the other girl having a nice little cry by herself in a sheltered nook. Besides, Bob by that time had been roasted to a turn and was nearly done and she was getting tired of Hassard, anyhow.

When finally Estelle and Bob made up and she snubbed Hassard, and put him in his proper place she felt quite a righteous glow, because she reflected, the other girl could be happy now. It was really a mean trick to punch on another girl's preserves and she was glad she was above it. And it was atrocious in Hassard to wander in his affections. Estelle felt very noble and self-sacrificing. She told herself she was glad she had done the right thing.

But deep down in the heart of the other girl was a spot that would ever rankle and slowly grow and blight all happiness for her—because she had learned in these few days to think. She had Hassard back, but she couldn't help wondering whether he came back because he wanted to or because there wasn't any other place for him to go.

As long as she lives she'll never find out. Still, perhaps it's a good thing for her to have something with which to occupy her mind on rainy days.

Bird's Gift of Divination. Before a thunderstorm the Australian hummingbird covers the top of its nest with cobweb, which is a nonconductor of electricity.

TO MEET NORMALS IN MORNING GAME

High School Football Team Goes to Plattville Tonight to Play There Tomorrow.

Fifteen members of the football squad of the Jansville high school, accompanied by Coach Knudson, will go to Plattville this evening at 7:20 to play a game with the Plattville Normal school tomorrow morning. They will return tomorrow afternoon. It is to be the first game of the season and will be somewhat of a tryout for the new men. Three of the players have never played football until this year. Most of the rest did not play with the first team last year. They have, however, been very faithful in attending practices, and seem to have had little trouble in learning the game under the new rules. They have been working good together, and Coach Knudson, who has been most careful in training them, expects that the eleven will be able to score against Plattville and at least hold them to a close score.

Only it in Jansville.

Chicago, Sept.—The interest in France, its language and people, manifested by Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago, has won recognition from the French government. # PHOTOGRAPHING APPLES

How Pictures or Words Are Printed by Nature on the Growing Fruit.

Occasionally much interest is aroused by the appearance in a fruit store of a few apples on which appear perfect photographs, not painted on but apparently in the skin of the fruit itself.

Though interesting, the method of making picture apples is simple and not at all difficult if the fruit is of a red variety. Just before the apple begins to turn a photographic film is fastened about it in such a manner that it will not move and blur the picture. The foliage is then removed so that the apple is exposed to the direct rays of the sun and nature does the printing. The prints are clear, sharp and perfect in every way, except that depth of tone is lacking. If it is desired to brand a name or words on the fruit, black paper should be used instead of the film, the desired letters being cut out.

Probably some clever advertiser will take advantage of this method some day, and we may be handed an apple on which is attractively etched something like "If I Give You Palms Take Pepper Popcorn Pills."

WHEN AND WHERE WILL THE WORLD'S SERIES OPEN?

At left, Charlie Murphy of the Chicago Cubs; in center, Connie Mack of Philadelphia; at right, Dan Johnson.

Philadelphia, Pa.—With the pennant all but nailed down by the Philadelphia and Chicago teams the most interesting topic in baseball is when and where the world's series will open. It is evident that a baseball war is due over this much debated point.

President Dan Johnson of the American league, and one of three members of the National commission, states he will try his best to force the start in Philadelphia on Monday or

Tuesday, October 17 or 18. This would put the Cubs to a disadvantage as they would have to make a long jump right after closing their season on Saturday night, and then would have to play on foreign grounds for the opening game of the championship. This would require the doubling up of the Chicago-St. Louis game which ends the series and St. Louis refuses to do this, according to Charlie Murphy of the Cubs.

If the St. Louis series are played off on schedule the Philadelphia team will be at a disadvantage in having to be idle several days before the series opens, and then opening on foreign grounds. Murphy says he is powerless; Connie Mack, as usual, is selfish-like. What the result will be will not be known until the national commission renders its decision.

DR. BEATON TO LECTURE ON "YELLOWSTONE PARK"

Will Tell Of His Recent Trip and Express His Views of the Great West.

At Congregational church this evening, Dr. David Beaton, the pastor, will give an illustrated lecture on places which he visited on his recent trip in the west. "The Yellowstone Park" is the subject of his address and will deal with the Shoshone Canyon and Sylvan Pass, the lake and mountains, the geysers and springs, and the river and falls in the wonderland of America. Dr. Beaton will also express his views on "The Great West" and "What It Has to Offer" and "Who Should Go." The lecture is given under the auspices of the Sunday School and promises to be very interesting. By special request, Mrs. Zoe Pearl Park of Chicago, a distinguished contralto, who is to sing at the services at the church on Sunday morning, will sing Kyrie's, "Last Night."

Change in Theaters.

"The actors for whom Shakespeare wrote" does not mean, as it would at present, the world of English-speaking actors; it means the company of which Shakespeare was a member. His work was done, not as a modern dramatist's, for any company which heaven and Frohman may please to call together, but for a small united band of men of whom he was one, with whom he lived in close intimacy. —July Atlantic.

MAKE YOUR OWN HAIR TONIC

A Specialista Advice.

In a recent issue the New York Herald published a special article on the care of the hair, in which was given the formula for a home-made hair tonic, which was highly recommended for stopping falling hair, revitalizing the hair roots, and destroying the dandruff germ. This article was of special interest to me, as the formula was one which I myself have seen used in countless cases with most astonishing benefit, thus confirming my belief that home-made preparations are the best. For the benefit of those who have not seen it before, I give the formula herewith.

Procure from your druggist an eight ounce bottle containing six ounces of Bay Rum, also purchase a two-ounce sealed bottle of Lavender de Composee (Smith's) and one-half dozen Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and then add the Lavender de Composee, shake thoroughly and apply at night and morning to the roots of the hair, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. This preparation contains no coloring matter, but restores gray hair to its natural color by its action on the hair roots. If you desire it perfumed add one-tenth spoonful of To-Kalon Perfume, which combines perfectly with the other ingredients and imparts a most pleasing scent. Be sure to get all enclosed in the Lavender de Composee package, as they give much valuable advice on care of the hair and besides entitle you to a sprinkler top for your bottle, free of charge.

Do not apply where hair is not desired.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

ON EVERY side I hear the sad news. It's spoken in the parlors. It's shouted across back fences. "I shouldn't wonder if it were even whispered in church."

What is it?

Why this, of course:

"They say hats are going to be bigger than ever this fall." "My countrywomen, if you really do wear bigger hats this winter than you have this summer, I'm ashamed of you."

As I am, and disappointed, and mighty night disgusted.

Right straight along I have been receiving letters asking me to write on this subject, but I thought the fashion had about spent its force, and then, as a certain friend of mine said, "Them as wants to wear such big hats will wear them anyway, and them as has some common sense don't need to be told not to."

But with this sad news continually assailing my ears, futile or not futile, I simply must register some protest.

In a very crowded car the other day I saw a woman with one of those enormous hats on, repeatedly buffing a man's face and mouth with the back of the brim. After standing it for a few minutes he suddenly opened his mouth and to the immense amusement of the crowd, began to spit the brim.

The girl turned around, grasped the situation, grew flery red, and threw a withering glance at the man.

The crowd roared with laughter at her discomfiture. I don't blame them or the man a bit. I trust it taught her a good lesson, although I doubt it, and I could almost find it in my heart to wish that all men who are treated that way would retaliate in a similar fashion.

If hats are really to be larger instead of smaller this winter, I think the matter has gone beyond the point of a joke.

It is twice as uncomfortable to travel in a crowded car or train as it used to be, because these ultra hats keep us all wretchedly crooking our necks to keep out of the way.

In church and in all auditoriums where women are not obliged to remove their hats, and at outdoor performances, the comfort and pleasure of other people is continually being spoiled by these ladies—no, ladies or women is altogether too good a name for them. I think I'll call them "centaurs"—who cheerfully block the view from take up three or four times the room of an ordinary head.

Do you know what they say about the American woman in Paris? "Oh, she'll wear anything. She has no taste. The more absurd, and outlandish, and heartless a thing is, the better she likes it."

And so they send along the dictum that hats are to be bigger than ever this winter and we slavishly obey.

Or shall we surprise them, and showing some thought for common sense and taste and courtesy, revolt from the dictum and say, "No, hats aren't to be bigger. They are to be decidedly smaller!"

What do you say, American women?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By Rose Kerrill.

By this time this article reaches you

the canning season will be on the wane. The shelves will either be full,

or will be alarmingly bare, according

as you have worked or played during the summer. Perhaps you thought it wiser to conserve your own strength, rather than preserve the fruits of the field. Perhaps you have had no opportunity. In either case you miss the feeling of con-

quiescence which the heart of the thrifty housewife who surveys her long shelves of winter supplies with much the same air that a miser would assume when gazing over his store of gold. Late peaches and tomatoes still linger. There are crab apples and a few plums and green tomatoes and

enough that still invite the household maw to don her cooking apron and capture a few last jars for the shelves which promise so richly.

The tomato, big is a variety which well repays the effort. Use the small yellow variety for this. The tiny red ones which have recently been introduced would be delicious also, I think,

but I have had no opportunity to handle them. Wash, wipe and weigh the tomatoes and allow equal weight of sugar. Pack them in quart jars kettles with the sugar and allow to stand forty-eight hours. They may then be boiled in their own syrup (all transparent when they should be lifted out and spread on plates and set in the sun for three or four days to dry. If the sun fails you they may be dried in the oven with the doors open and a very slow fire. This is very time-consuming, however, and sun-

shiny weather should be selected for the work. For each pound of fruit add the syrup one-quarter of a pound of ground ginger and the juice and rind of one lemon. Boil the syrup down

(all very rich and thick and allow to cool. Dip the tomatoes in this each morning while drying, draining them thoroughly each time. Allow to dry for two days after the last dipping

and then roll them in confectioners'

sugar and leave them in the sun until they seem perfectly dry. Pack them in either tin boxes or in jelly glass jars. Place waxed paper over the top and cover closely to exclude insects. They will make dainty Christmas gifts for very special friends.

For green tomato pickles there are many recipes and they are so easy to make them. Use common sense and vary the recipe for your own use as pleases you.

Little hints:

Place a round, thin apple in the stone jar when you keep cakes. It will shield without decaying and the moisture will keep the cake from drying.

Clean silver by allowing it to lie all night in sour milk and simply washing in the morning.

Brush dust out of the hair by first brushing the hair over absorbent cotton. The cotton will absorb the dust and grease and will not come off

on the hair.

Handed hair jars may be sweetened

by filling with skin milk over night.

Lighting to a boil by glow degree next day and scald out with soda water and then sun.

Chutneys should be removed from natery or white goods by moistening floor or sulphur with alcohol and lighting it. Invert a funnel over it and hold the goods over the tube allowing the fumes to reach every part of the stain. Rinse in clear water to which has been added a little disinfectant and launder as usual.

What is it? And why does it escape the most ardent seekers? That is a difficult question to answer. Sometimes it is the studied air of careles-

ness which makes the guest feel unwelcome. Perhaps lack of it all is the lack of real joy of friends and,

again, perhaps it is due to the awkward expression of a timid soul seeking friendship among those about it.

Devote yourself to serious consideration of the subject. Do not be satisfied with the mere fact of having induced invitations to a hundred guests

when your friends can not entertain more than fifty. Do not imagine that a "function" is more desirable than an enjoyable time. You have not done all when you have invited a number of guests and provided a game, and a delightful bill of fare. There must be into the entertainment your personality and your heart.

Entertaining is like making Christmas gifts—only a delight when you love the other person. This whole-saying giving of either your hospitality or your gifts is absurd. Better a dozen little joyful evenings than one big affair, even if the society column

does not think your efforts worthy of notice.

This absurd big function, which is merely a method of wiping the slate

clean of debts is the ruin of real hospitality. Pay your social debts by the smaller and more informal affairs which mean a thousand times more than the big entertainment, which is usually entertaining in intent only.

Line your walls with books. Fill your head with ideas. Fill your heart with love of your kind and you will

at least have found the door to the life of real home-making. Make your friends welcome to your best—whether it be of your heart or your heart.

Live simply and be not afraid to offer

your simple hospitality to whomsoever

you consider worthy of your friendship. Wealth of purse may be on the other side, but no one can out-

match the truly hospitable soul in wealth of love. There is the keynote

if you would make your home all the name implies.

Laundry Stamped for Identifying.

In foreign countries some strange methods are adopted for identifying the contents of the washbasin. In some parts of France linen is defaced with the whole name and address of the laundry stamped upon it, and an additional geometrical design to indicate the owner of the property. In Bavaria every patron of the washbasin has a number stamped in large characters

on his linen. In Bulgaria every laundry has a large number of stamps engraved with designs, and in Russia

the laundries mark linen with threads worked in arrow shapes. In some Russian towns the police periodically issue regulations for laundries.

Land's Profit.

Vineyards in southern France are worth $210 to $100, and flower and vegetable lands $100 to $800 an acre.

TAPE CLOTH SUIT.

So far the new fall costumes have been very good looking. One could not ask for a more simple and at the same time stylish coat suit than above model. It is made from tape cloth, with shawl collar and cuffs of pink-striped green and black velvet.

The large ermine muff gives a charming finishing touch.

GOOD LOOKING AND PRACTICAL.

A suggestion for the college girl.

A coat suit of mixed tweed—the coat reaching well below knees. The design of this is simple but smart, embodying style and durability.

Why Fall Off?

Having been shaven in barber shops

many years, we know a good deal about barbers and barber shops. The porter always interests us. No barber shop porter seems to last more than a month. For the first week the barber shop porter is a jewel, but after that he begins to fall off. In two weeks the proprietor begins grumbling, and in a month a new porter appears. Then the old porter walks the street looking for a job.

(Since the porter wants a job why doesn't he keep it when he gets one?)

Why don't you do it? Why do you

"fall off" after you have had a place

a while? We all do it, more or less.

A NEW ANTISEPTIC.

Germs enter the human body through the mouth or throat and through the skin whenever there is a cut or scratch. A little care in the beginning will prevent almost every case of blood poison, diphtheria, scarlet fever, tonsillitis, and other germ diseases if people would only remember to make the mouth, throat or every scratch or wound antiseptic at once with Thym Ozone, the new antiseptic which is a new germ killer but not a poison to the healthy flesh.
Thym Ozone is composed of Oxygen, Thymol, Wintergreen, Eucalyptus and other strong but not poisonous antiseptics. It acts at once, purifies every wound, kills cancer sores, ring worms, eruptions of the skin, cleans the mouth and nasal passages of germs, boils and ulcers are made clean in a few hours. Thym Ozone reduced with glycerine and warm water is the best remedy for Nasal catarrh. It's heating, soothing and antiseptic effect is noticed at once. Every family should have a bottle in the house to apply to any wound. Don't take chances of getting blood poison. Thym Ozone is sold only by the Budger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River streets, at 25c per bottle.

TOUCHING FAREWELL

TO ASA J. HARWOOD

Fellow-Employees At Lewis Knitting Mills Presented Retiring Supperintendent With Diamond Stick Pin.

Asa J. Harwood who has resigned his position as superintendent of the Lewis Knitting Co's plant and who departs tomorrow, accompanied by his family, to take charge of a similar factory at Richmond, Indiana has been presented by his co-workers with a beautiful diamond stickpin as a token of the high regard which his genial personality and kindly, helpful methods have won for him during the past seven years. The employees gathered around Mr. Harwood in the main workroom when the day's labor was completed at six o'clock last evening and J. E. Bennett, night watchman and one of the oldest employees of the concern, made the presentation. Mr.
Harwood was completely taken by surprise and was deeply moved by this evidence of regard and good will
that he could express his appreciation only in the briefest and simplest possible way—"I thank you—I can say no more." Mr. Bennett, also, was overcome by emotion and unable to utter a word of appreciation. Things he had planned to say, and so with all the others. It was one of those unusual and too infrequent little scenes which serve to demonstrate that after all this is a good world and a good time to be living in it.

RELIEF CORPS LADIES

SURPRISED MRS. ISAACS

At Her Home on Wisconsin St. Yesterday and Presented Her With Handsome Gift.

Mrs. Cora Isaacs, who is soon to leave for a new home in California, was pleasantly surprised by the Women's Relief Corps ladies at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Osgood, on Wisconsin street, Yesterday, the event being in the nature of a farewell. Delicious refreshments were served and the afternoon was given up to a social good time. In behalf of the ladies, Mrs. Anna Morse, president of Corps No. 21, presented Mrs. Isaacs with a handsome piece of silver as a token of the esteem in which she is held by her associates

London, September 30.—A telegram just received from Tours contains the following news: There is considerable insubordination in the French Army; officers are apparently unable to prevent disorder and violence
among raw and undisciplined soldiers.
Several examples have been made.
The Prussians have not yet arrived at Orleans; they have doubled from their westward march and seem to be concentrating around Paris. The reported movement of the Prussians
on Lyons is also untrue.
The French say the Prussian losses, since the war began and particularly at the investment of Paris, have been so immense that the German authorities have taken care to conceal the facts from the authorities.

From New York.

New York, September 30.—Horrible revolutions come up from Jersey City about the manufacture of snuffboxes.
It is now certain, that dogs, cats,
horses, and diseased hogs are clipped up for snuffbox meat in the large establishments in that suburb. Justice Barney issued orders for the arrest of the perpetrators of these outrages,
and names and particulars are forthcoming.

TAMMANY CHIEF IS RULER OF CONVENTION

Murphy Shows Power in New York
Democratic Gathering—Alton B.
Parker Temporary Officer.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 30.—With Charles D. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, in complete control of the machinery, the Democratic state convention met here, listened to a speech by Alton B. Parker, temporary chairman, and then took an adjournment.

Mr. Parker, in a keynote utterance, scored Theodore Roosevelt and closed with a severe arraignment of one-man domination at the Saratoga convention.

Aside from the attack on Roosevelt there was but little interest in the proceedings, interest being centered in the hotel conference in which nearly a dozen candidates are scrambling to be slated for governor.

Directly or indirectly, all questions of availability and fitness come ultimately before the triumvirate of which Charles F. Murphy is the dominating personality. It is the admission of Norman K. Mack, chairman of the national Democratic committee, that Murphy controls the situation.

The problem that Mr. Murphy faces is one that needs all his caution, experience and judgment. He must find a candidate who will be strong enough to run at least an even race with Henry L. Hudson, backed by Theodore Roosevelt, who will command the support of Democrats of all shades of opinion, and who can win over the support of William Randolph Hearst.

The leaders all feel that with Mayor Gaynor eliminated from consideration as a candidate, Mr. Hearst becomes once more a factor with whom to reckon.

AUTO OUTSPEEDS A BIPLANE

Machine Circles Mile Track Thrice
While Air Craft Goes Twice.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Driving an automobile, his Fiat "Cyclone," Ralph De Palma defeated Eugene Ely in a biplane of the Curtiss pattern at the Hudson river driving park, circling the mile track three times in 5:54, 5:54 and 5:54, respectively. De Palma made three circuits of the course to Ely's two before 10,000 people, preceding De Palma's race, E. H. Parker, defeated Ely in about the same time.

Buy Insurance; Is Killed.

Montgomery, Mo., Sept. 30.—Orion Clark, a prosperous farmer and stockman, bought a 25-cent accident policy and started to St. Louis. He was killed by the cars before his train left the county.

A Dreamer.

Emerson's voice was sharp as he cried, "I understand all that, but I am to understand also that the directors of the N. A. C. A. instructed him to kill me!"

"But, and! Don't talk nonsense. You admit that you have no proof of William's connection with the attempt upon your life. You put yourself in the way of danger when you hired a man labor to break that strike. I think you got off very easily."

"If Marsh was instructed to crush the independents, why has he centered all his efforts on me alone? Why has he spent this summer in Kalvik and not among the other stations to the south?"

"That is our business. Different methods are required in different localities."

"Then you have no criticism to make —you uphold him?" Boyd's indignation was getting beyond control.

"None whatever. Your complaints do not appeal to me. Even granting your absurd assumption that Marsh tried to put you out of the way, it seems to me that you have more than evened the score."

"How?"

"He is still wearing bandages over that knife thrust you gave him."
Emerson leaped to his feet.

"He knows I didn't do that—everybody knows it!" he cried. "He lied to you."

"We won't discuss that," said Wayne Wayland curtly. "What do you want me to do?"

"I want you to end this persecution.
I want you to call him off."

"In other words, you want me to sue you?"

Emerson swallowed. "I suppose it amounts to that. I want to be let alone. I want a square deal."

"Well, I want," Wayne's voice hardened suddenly; his sound, white teeth snapped together. "You are getting exactly what you deserve. You betrayed me by spying upon me while you broke bread in my house. I see nothing reprehensible in Mr. Marsh's conduct, but even if I did I would not condone him. Any measures are justifiable against a traitor."

Boyd Emerson's face went gray
beneath the coating of tan, and his voice
threatened to break as he said:

"I am no traitor, and you know it.
I thought you a man of honor, and I came to you for help, but for June this. But I see I was mistaken. I am beginning to believe that Marsh acted under your instructions from the first."

"Believe what you choose."
"You think you've got me, but you haven't. I'll beat you yet."

"You can't beat me at anything."
Mr. Wayland's jaws were set like iron.

"Not this year perhaps, but next.
You and Marsh have whipped me this time, but the salmon will come again,
and I'll run my plant in spite of hell!"

Wayne Wayland made no sign as to speech, but Boyd went on unheeding:
"You've taken a dislike to me, but your conduct shows that you fear me.
You are afraid I'll succeed, and I will."

"Brave talk," said the older man.
"But you owe $100,000, and your stockholders will learn of your mismanagement."

"Your persecution, you mean!" cried
Boyd.

"We've won, my boy! We've won!"

seen his scanty crew of gill netters return empty handed with the rising sun, exhausted, disheartened, depleted in numbers, yet there before him were thousands of salmon. They were straw in a great mass upon the dock and inside the shed, while from the across beneath they came in showers as the handlers tossed them upward from their "pans." Through the wide doors he saw the backs of the butchers busy at work over their tables and heard the uproar of his cannery running full for the first time.

Before the launch had touched he had leaped to the ladder and swung himself upon the dock. He stumbled into the arms of Big George.

"Where did those fish come from?"
he cried breathlessly.

"From the trap," George smiled as he had not smiled in many weeks.

"They're struck in like I knew they would, and they're running now by the thousands. I've fished those waters for years, but I never seen the likes of
it. They'll tear that trap to pieces.

They're smothering in the pot, tons and tons of 'em, with millions more milling below the leads because they can't get in. It's a sight you'll not see once in a lifetime."

"That means that we can run the plant—that we'll get all we can use?"

"Say, we've got fish enough to run two canneries. They've struck their gill, I tell you, and they'll never stop now, night or day, till they're through.
We don't need no gill netters. What we need is butchers and salmers and handlers. There never was a trap site in the north till this one. I told Willis Marsh that years ago. He flung out a long, hairy arm, bared half to the shoulder, and waved it exultantly.

"We built this plant to cook 40,000 salmon a day, but I'll bring you 3,000 every hour, and you've got to cook
'em. Do you hear?"

"And they couldn't cook us after all!"
Emerson leaped unsteadily against a pile, for his head was whirling.

"No! We'll show that gang what a cannery can do. Marsh's traps will rot where they stand. The George shook his tight clenched fist again. "We've won, my boy! We've won!"

"Then don't let us stand here talking."

Boyd Emerson's face went gray
beneath the coating of tan, and his voice
threatened to break as he said:

the offer. "I can explain. They will wait another year. I will raise more money, and they will stand by me."
"Perhaps I know more about that than you do."

Emerson strode toward the dock menacingly, crying in a quivering voice:

"I warn you to keep your hands off them. Don't try any of your financial trickery with me, or I'll—"

Wayne Wayland leaped from his chair, his face purple and his eyes flashing savagely.

"Leave this yacht!" he thundered.
"I won't allow you to insult me. I won't stand your threats. I've got you where I want you, and when the time comes you'll know it. Now, get out!" He stretched forth a great square hand and closed it so fiercely that the fingers cracked. "I'll crush you—like that!"

Boyd turned and strode from the cabin.

Half blinded with anger, he stumbled down the ladder to his launch.

"Back to the plant!" he ordered, then glared with lowering brows and defiant eyes at the Grande Dame as she rested swanlike and serene at her morning. His anger against Mikkred's father destroyed for the time all thought of his disappointment at her own lack of understanding and her cool acceptance of his failure. "He saw only that his affairs had reached a final climax where he must bow to the inevitable or—Big George's parting words came to him—strike one last blow in reprisal."

It was the hour of his darkest despair—the real crisis in his life. There are times when it rests with fate to make a strong man stronger or turn him altogether to evil. Such a man will not accept misfortune tamely. He is the reverse of those who are good through weakness. It is his nature to shrink strongly.

But the unexpected happened, and Boyd's black mood vanished in amazement at the sight which met his eyes.
Moored to the dock was a lighter swash with a cargo that made him stare and doubt his vision. He had seen his scanty crew of gill netters return empty handed with the rising

Hurry!" He turned, and sped up the dock.

He had come into his own at last,
and he roared with light about teeth
that no wheel should stop, no belt should slacken, no man should leave his duty, till the run had passed. At the entrance to the thrashing, chun-

with a smile looked toward the yacht floating lazily in the distance. Then, with knees sagging beneath him from weariness, he entered.

CHAPTER XIX.

"I've heard the news!" cried
Cherry later that afternoon, shrieking to make herself
heard above the rattle and jar of the machinery.

"There seems to be a Providence that watches over fishermen," said Boyd.

"I am happy for your sake, and I want to apologize for my display of temper. Come away where I won't have to scream so. I want to talk to you."

"It is made to my ears," he answered as he led her past the rows of Chinamen bowed before their soldiering torches as if bowed with some heavenly rites. "But I'm glad to sit down just the same. I've been on my feet for thirty-six hours."

"It's too much for one man," she declared.

"Oh, I'll sleep tomorrow."
"Did you see her?" questioned Cherry.

"Yes."
"She must be very proud of you,"
she said wistfully.

"I—I don't think she understands what I am trying to do or what it means. Our talk was not very satisfactory."

"She surely must have understood what Marsh is doing."
"I didn't tell her that."

"Why not?"
"What good would it have done?"

"Why?" Cherry seemed bewildered—
"She could put a stop to it; she could use her influence with her father against Marsh. I expected to see your old crew back at work again. Oh, I wish I had her power!"

"She wouldn't take a hand under any circumstances—it wouldn't occur to her—and naturally I couldn't ask her." Boyd flushed uncomfortably.

"Thanksto George's trap, there is no need." He went on to tell Cherry of the scene with Mr. Wayland and its stormy ending.

"They have used all their resources to down you," she said, "but look is with you, and you mustn't let them succeed. Now is the time to show them what is in you. Go in and win her now against all odds."

"He was grateful for her sympathy, yet somehow it made him uncomfortable."

"What was it you wished to see me about?" he asked.

"Oh! Have you seen Chakawana?"
"No."

"She disappeared early this morning soon after the yacht came in. I can't find her anywhere. She took the baby with her, and—I'm worried."

"Doesn't Constantine know where she is?"

"Why, Constantine is down here, isn't he?"

The oldest roofing on the market—
laid on roofs nineteen years ago,
and still there—sold in every country in the world—subject to the fiercest competition—tried by over three hundred imitators, many of whom copy its very name as closely as possible—Ruberoid Roofing still dominates the roofing market in the quality of the product and the volume of its sales.

You can identify genuine, lasting Ruberoid Roofing by the large trade-mark picture of the Ruberoid man, shown herewith, which appears on the outside
of each roll.

Ruberoid Roofing,
manufactured by The Standard Paint Co., is made of wool felt. Its value lies in the gum
with which it is saturated and coated so that the gum and wool in combination make Ruberoid
the most lasting roof covering known. This gum contains no rubber and no oil. It is absolutely waterproof. It keeps its life and does not crack or dry out. It resists gases and acids more than other roof coverings. It is tasteless and odorless, and water collected on it can be used for drinking purposes. It is an insulator and so keeps a house warm in winter and cool in summer.
Ruberoid Roofing is highly fire-resisting.

Another advantage of Ruberoid Roofing is that it is also made in permanent colors of RED and GREEN. The reason Ruberoid colors are permanent is that they are not painted on—they are built into the fabric, and so cannot peel off.

The satisfaction Ruberoid Roofing gives in resisting temperature, moisture, chemical action and time,
are the proofs of its supremacy, and are known to every man acquainted with roof covering. Our efforts are directed at guiding the consumer through the maze of imitation and enabling him to get RUBEROID ROOFING when he asks for it.
